

Lary Coppola: By The Numbers

As Mayor, Lary Coppola managed to increase his salary from $19,738 to a total of $62,150 (plus benefits!) just months after running to serve as a part time mayor. That makes him among the highest in the region - nearly twice that of Bremerton's mayor on a per capita basis.

(Association of Washington Cities Survey, 2010)

Just this past summer, Lary maneuvered to sell his commercial property to the City of Port Orchard for $457,000, almost $125,000 above its assessed value - the same property he claimed was over-assessed when he was threatening to sue the County over excessive valuation.

The mayor's publishing office is a 1962 split-level with detached garage, valued by the Kitsap County Assessor's Office at $332,210. But, Coppola believes it is worth more, between $620,000 and $640,000.

And now our utility bills are skyrocketing, with plans to more than double current water rates - all on Lary Coppola's watch as Mayor.

When families are struggling to make ends meet in these dire economic times, the last thing we can afford is a Mayor on a spending spree, selling us his own over-inflated property, more than doubling his own salary and making plans to hit us with more for our water bills.

It's us taxpayers who write these checks.
